

HEADHUNTER

DR. ANGEL CULBARD

IN SHORT: You're a respected retired physician with something of a spirit familiar.

THE WORST THING THAT EVER HAPPENED

TO YOU: Oh, clearly that was Donna Sills. You screwed up her anesthesia and she died. It was 100% your fault. You hadn't been practicing surgical anesthesiology for very long. Donna was fourteen and you lowballed her dosage to the point that she went into cardiac distress, then you overcompensated and the surgeons were unable to resuscitate her. She was in for... heart surgery? That sounds right. It was years and years ago.

The other doctors covered for you and talked her parents back from a lawsuit. It tore you up and you swore it would never happen again. But it did.

The second time wasn't as bad, though it still sucked and the relatives (including a wife this time) were angrier and more litigious, so you had to go to court. But again, the rest of the surgical staff testified on your behalf.

The thing you had to accept—that all medical professionals must—is that to be mortal and human is to err. Every doctor drops the ball now and again. You were, statistically, a safer anesthesiologist than the national average. Your many, many patients who thrived and survived were lucky to have you.

It never stopped bothering you, but by the end, having someone die on the table bothered you less than the thought that maybe it didn't bother you enough. It turned... recursive, in your mind, and that was when you decided to retire. You've retained your license to practice in Nebraska, though.

WHERE YOU ARE NOW: While still working, you had some experiences that introduced you to a fascinating new field of study, albeit one lacking the scientific rigor of your biology classes. Since retirement, you've become more involved in the occult, which is full of dirtbags. It's unkind to call people that, but often not inaccurate. You are partnered with a onetime small-end con artist and contortionist—Jesse Viscarrat—and you've been burglarizing demonologists and cultists to keep the world safe and, it must be said, also learn some fascinating things.

YOUR INTRODUCTION TO THE OCCULT:

Cepatol™ is a schedule V drug that you favored as an induction agent and also for conscious sedation. In lay terms, it was a controlled substance of the mildest variety, which you used WARNING: Use of Cepatol™ may result in profound sedation, respiratory depression, coma, and death. Reserve for use in patients with a clear airway and adequate ventilation. Do not use in patients with known or suspected respiratory depression or in patients with a history of substance abuse. Cepatol™ is a controlled substance. Use only as directed. to depress breathing and heart rate before more intrusive anesthesia, and also for pain relief and deliberate amnesia for outpatient procedures like colonoscopies.

During conscious sedation people often talk nonsensically—like a dying Dutch Schultz. But when you used Cepato™ on your patients, different patients began talking about the same things: A garden of crystal; a secret court of nuns and priests; “the rhythm of cataclysm;” a silver circle-cross.

The remarkable thing you noticed was that even patients who spoke no English when awake could recite these bizarre non-sequiturs under the influence of Cepato™. So you started asking questions.

Cepato™ remembers you. You can remind a 40-year-old man in a Cepato™ trance of something you told a 27-year-old woman a year before, and as long as she was in the Cepato™ state, the man remembers it.

Cepato™ claims it was a woman long ago, in another world. She has warned you of dangers in this one.

WHY ARE YOU WILLING TO DRIVE TO CANADA AND ROB A MUSEUM?:

A surprising number of occultists—almost all the consistent and intelligent ones—believe the world changed in 2003, specifically March 3rd. (Cepato™ agrees.) Looking through papers from that date, you found a story about a stone head, excavated from a mound builder archaeological dig in Ohio, being moved to Canada. As soon as you read that, pieces fell together. There were uncanny resemblances between that head and (1) a famous painting of “Count Welldone,” (2) the historically eradicated pharaoh in the collection of a Kansas devil-worshiper, (3) the unidentified Moche statue at the center of a curious occult intrigue in Dallas, and (4) the drawings produced by a congenitally blind prophet in New England. They all show the same man, and this statue appears to be one more effigy of a sort of cosmic regulator... a judge of this life and the next, a figure mediating between magick and humanity. In 2003, many believe this godlike interlocutor was somehow deposed or imprisoned. Recovering the head and restoring it to the mound could be the first step to remedying everything that’s been going wrong since then.

A COUPLE OTHER THINGS YOU SHOULD

KNOW: The year is 2017 and you don’t speak French.

THE REST OF THE CREW

- Karen Conti: An otherworldly visionary deftly navigating the interior of identity and the exterior of presentation. A genuine, practicing magickal adept.
- Cloisonné Farr: Karen’s teen daughter. The two of them appear to be an inseparable package deal. She’s smart and cunning, which only makes you more worried about her.
- Jesse Viscarrat: You would never tell Jesse how much you think of yourself as their savior, but you do think if you hadn’t met, Jess might be on a very dark path. As is, you’ve helped this erstwhile ex-carny turn burglary skills towards a rough virtue. You’d also never tell Jesse how lost you’d be if the pair of you were separated.
- Lee Ybarra: The computer hacker is no bespectacled nerd, but an ex-Marine with some pretty serious leg atrophy. They won’t be at full function without a long stretch of pretty serious physical therapy. You and Jesse found Lee an herb-worker to cure a nasty, nasty pill habit.

YOUR JUNK

- Roughly enough Cepato™ to tranquilize a zoo. Some of it is correctly labeled. Some of it you have pill-pressed into ersatz antacid tablets in half-full generic bottles.
- A doctor’s bag full of first aid supplies
- A fair variety of hypnotics, anesthetics, depressants, and other assorted medicines. Jesse calls your collection “Woodstock in a bag.”
- A set of sterile surgical tools in a dusty valise
- An expensive high-powered camera with a very good telephoto lens and tripod
- A well-maintained 2015 Audi sedan
- Plenty of cash
